HENRY F. TIEDEMANN 516 EAST WILSON.

error political vicarities the governor had won were applied to his own bow and arrow.

GOVERNOR'S FIRST SPEECH

Gov. Van Hise's address was well received. His address was both instructive and inspiring, he said, to occupy but five minutes though that time was exceeded.

"There could not have been heard on this continent a better piece for a state," he declared. The short and energy required to make the primary forests, bring the soil under cultivation and lay the foundation of the present great industries of the state had developed a hardy type of pioneers well fitted to stock a state with real men and women, he said. Free independent men, he declared, were a guarantee of a free, independent state. He paid an eloquent tribute to the work of the university.

SPOONER'S REPLY

After the governor's address the following telegram from Senator John C. Spooner was read by Senator Vilas:

"It has given me great regret not to be able to accept the invitation to be present at the dinner to be given in Madison tonight to the legislature. The impeachment trial and the business pressing upon the senate at this short session draws to an end renders it impossible for me, with due regard to the public duty, to be so long absent. My compliments and best wishes to the hosts and guests."

VAN HISE ON UNIVERSITY

President Van Hise followed, speaking on the university. He emphasized the point that the university belonged to Wisconsin and not to Madison alone. He would see it strengthened and broadened and pointed in comparison to the great work done by Japanese and German universities. He said: "I shall never be content until the beneficial influence of the university reaches every family of the state. This is my ideal of a state university. If our institution reaches this ideal, it will be the first perfect state university." He praised the wisdom of the founders of the state who placed in the framework of the state constitution, a provision for the founding of one university at the capital city, thus forever providing against subdivision and localization of the state's higher education.

HOARD ON THE PRESS

Former Gov. W. D. Hoard spoke for "The Press." With his sage remarks many witty stories slipped naturally in. He deplored the growing loss of influence by the press and said it was due to editors thinking one thing and writing another. The note of insincerity can always be detected. He urged the editors to take counsel of their courage and not of their cowardice and to stand bravely for the elemental necessities of society, for pure politics, religion and liberty.

PROF. FREEMAN

In a speech replete with wit and good counsel, Prof. J. C. Freeman spoke to the "Our History." He said, however, it would be idle to tell the company the history of the state. "You have lived it and made it," he said. If any more history were wanted he referred his hearers to the 200,000 volumes in the library. The university and the capital were not local institutions, but were as state wide in all respects as the commonwealth itself, he said. Various sites had been suggested for the location of the new state house, but there was only one place for it, and that was where the present building now stands, he said.

DONNELLY'S WIT

Joseph U. Donnelly, of Milwaukee, responding to the sentiment, "The Private Citizen," entertained richly with the eloquence and wit for which he is noted wherever he has been heard. He placed the private citizen, the man out of office (in which number he said most democrats these days were included) above the sovereign holder of public place. He said he would rather be a private citizen and work for a corporation, than be high in the nation's councils and "be worked" by the corporations.

WHITEHEAD CLOSES PROGRAM

Senator Whitehead, of Janesville, was the last speaker, responding to the toast, "The Legislature." He outlined the functions of the legislature.

"TO OUR CITIZENS"

We wish to thank our generous citizens who responded so liberally in making our legislative and Press Budget a grand success, after our career, who equally say to the state. Thanks to all.

and attributed to its good and wise judgment much of the prosperity and general advancement of the interests of the state. "When a law is enacted it is the utterance of the people of the state," said the senator. The state would well be proud of its record as shown by its statutes, he declared. He spoke of the splendid educational system of the state, and said that the entire brilliant history of the founding and perfection of the system was written in the laws enacted by the legislature. He referred to the increasing complexity of the legislative needs of the state and declared that the legislature should have the credit to which it was justly entitled in solving with wisdom and prudence the many important problems coming before it. One of the greatest matters that had ever come before the legislature was the building of a new capitol. The question as to when it shall be built, where it shall stand, and what it shall cost were pressing for answers. These questions were not only before the legislature, but were also in the hands of the press of the state for settlement.

The Turkey's Real Name. The original name of the turkey was oocooocoo, by which it was known by the native Cherokee Indians. It is supposed that our pilgrim fathers, coming through the woods in search of game for their first Thanksgiving spread, heard the oocooocoo calling in the familiar tones of our domestic fowl, "Turk, turk, turk." They, Yankee hunters, mistaking this frightened cry of the bird for its real song, immediately labeled it "turkey," and turkey it is to this day. Much more beautiful and musical was the Indian name oocooocoo, the notes peculiar to the flock when sunning themselves in perfect content on the river beaches.—Shower Magazine.

He Told the Truth. An Irish gentleman had a splendid looking cow, but she kicked so much that it took a very long time and it was almost impossible to milk her, so he sent her to a fair to be sold and told his herdsmen to be sure not to sell her without letting the buyer know her faults. He brought home a large price which he had got for it. His master was surprised and said, "Are you sure you told all about her?" "E-dad, I did," said the herdsmen. "He asked me whether she was a good milker. He says, 'No,' says I, 'It's you'd be tired milking her.'"—Seventy Years of Irish Life.

The Dragon Tree. The dragon tree (Dracena draco), which yields the stringent gummy resin called dragon's blood, is an old settler of the Canary islands. A veritable colossus of this family once grew in the town of Orzova, Tenerife, which was nearly feet in circumference at the base, hollow inside, with a staircase for visitors to ascend to the branching top of the trunk. Humboldt remarks that its antiquity must have been greater than that of the pyramids. This giant went down in a hurricane in 1807.

We Hold our Feet. A lawyer had a horse that always stamped and refused to cross a certain bridge leading out of the city. No matter how he urged, would refuse him to cross it, so he advertised him. "To be sold for no other reason than that the owner wants to get out of town."

MADISON HOST TO ITS VISITORS

Legislators and Editors Entertained at Big Dinner

TALK TOPICS OF STATE INTEREST

Prof. Freeman's Address by Distinguished Citizens Heard by Large Gathering

Six hundred and seventy-five men and women, legislators and editors and their ladies, sat down to the dinner given at the university armory Wednesday evening by the citizens of Madison. It was a most happy occasion, the dinner was served with much elegance in spite of the large number present, and the speakers treated the company pleasantly with the wisdom of which they had made.

The guests were seated at six long tables running the whole length of the hall. Before seating they were received at the door by Col. and Mrs. W. F. Vilas, President and Mrs. C. R. Van Hise, Judge and Mrs. E. W. Keyes, Gov. and Mrs. R. M. La Follette and Mayor W. D. Hoard.

It is the aim of the leading breeders today to keep up the large flow of milk for which the Holstein Friesian cattle are famous, and at the same time to improve the percentage of butter fat.

Mr. Kinman is just starting a Stock Farm at Gerrits Park, Wis., and was determined to have the first he could get regardless of cost. After visiting many of the best breeders in the U. S. he selected this bull. The animal was shipped by express, a distance of over 1,200 miles. The express charges were about $40.

Crockery and glassware will be on sale at The Fair next week at prices that will guarantee a saving of from 15 to 35 per cent.

Back to the Future. Blumhardt and Reichenow, the Austrian premier, decided to get a dog upon a certain morning. "What are you now?" said Blumhardt. "We have a pistol here." And they agreed to a duel there and then. But the Reichenow had to write a dispatch to his government giving the name of the dog. This he asked Reichenow to do. "I will read the report and his name cooled." "What you say is quite correct," he remarked, "but it is really worth fighting a duel for such a worthless dog?" "That is exactly my opinion," said Blumhardt, and the matter ended on the spot. Then Blumhardt's triumph, but Reichenow would not let the iron chancellor challenge him. "Here are two saucers," said Blumhardt, "one filled with vinegar, the other perfectly wholesome. But they cannot be told apart. Let us see if I will eat the other." The duel was not fought.
